Qualcomm is pleased to host the Fall 2018 WG21 working meeting on November 5-10, 2018 at:

Town and Country San Diego
500 Hotel Circle North, San Diego, CA 92108

This is both the meeting and recommended lodging location. We encourage participants to stay at the meeting hotel and take advantage of the negotiated room rate of $169 USD per night, which includes internet access, free parking and a fitness center.

Register using this link before October 12, 2018.

Travel: San Diego International Airport (SAN) is served by Delta, United, American, Southwest, Alaska, and other airlines. There are daily nonstop flights from London and Zurich. Our hotel does not provide a shuttle service to/from the airport. Taxis (estimated fare $30 USD one way), shuttle service (~$15 USD one way), and rental cars (~10 miles from the airport to the hotel) are available.

Public Transit: The Town and Country is easily accessible from the Fashion Valley transit center. From the airport, take the (free) shuttle to the Santa Fe Depot, and then board the Green Line trolley ($2.50) to Fashion Valley. Walk south from the station to the hotel (200 yards).

Local Dining: Participants will be responsible for their own morning and evening meals. Qualcomm will be providing lunch for the participants. The hotel is near a mall with numerous restaurants, and public transportation to downtown and other areas is close by.

Weather: November weather in San Diego is almost always pleasant and average highs are in the mid 70s°F (25°C) with lows in the mid 50s°F (13°C). Though possible, there is a low risk of precipitation in early November.

Local Attractions: For those who arrive early or stay after the meeting, San Diego is a world-class tourist destination. The San Diego Zoo and Sea World are within 10 miles of the hotel, as well as Balboa Park and the historic Gaslamp Quarter of downtown San Diego. San Diego is also the home of a thriving craft-beer industry, with more than 150 breweries.
